It has been my privilege to have had the opportunity to work very closely with Leaford Bearskin, in the preparation of this book. First he lived a life of exemplary service and leadership and now he has provided a wealth of information and patiently answered all questions.

A simple thank you to Chief Bearskin, and his lovely wife, Barbara, seems so small, in comparison to all the interesting and educational moments with them. Barbara kindly shared information and photos from their personal collection. Without their assistance, this project would have been much longer in the making.

One can not overlook Tiny Eads, Executive Secretary to the Chief, who has been so helpful in scheduling meetings and interviews. She was always available with a wonderful smile, to assist in any way. Judy Lofland has also been quite helpful, throughout the process. My thanks and appreciation is extended to both these ladies.

I am grateful to all those individuals who were interviewed and have allowed some of their comments to be published. You are all greatly appreciated.

In the later days of the project, I was able to locate some wonderful folks associated with the 90th Heavy Bombardment Group, the Jolly Rogers, and other websites. These amazing, selfless people have been more than willing to share photos and information, which have enhanced the project. My thanks to David L. Stockton, for steering me in the right direction and to Bob Tupa and Bob Livingstone, for their assistance in this area.

Some of the repositories used in the research for this book are the National Archives, Washington, DC, Oklahoma Historical Society, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma and the Kansas State Historical Society, Topeka, Kansas. Various other private and public collections were also searched.

I would be remiss if I did not share my appreciation and love for my husband, Fredas L. Cook, and my daughter, Carrie Ann Cook, for all their understanding, encouragement and help throughout the entire process. Such projects do not come to a successful conclusion without support and cooperation.
